Tier 1: Cold DM / Email

Template A — Identity Gap (most common)

Subject (email): Your product deserves a stronger brand system

Hi [Name],

I have been following [Brand] for a while. The quality of [specific product or collection] is clear, and the creative direction behind the pieces stands out.

One thing I noticed is that the brand presentation, across your website, social pages, and packaging, does not yet match the level of the product itself. That gap can make it harder for new customers to immediately understand the positioning.

We run Visiominds, a brand and design studio in Lagos. We recently rebuilt the entire identity for Cleaniche, a fashion brand with a similar challenge, and the difference in how people perceive the brand has been significant.

Would you be open to a quick conversation about what we observed? No pitch, just a few specific thoughts on [Brand].

Template B — Digital Presence Gap

Subject (email): [Brand]'s digital presence vs the product

Hi [Name],

[Brand]'s pieces are strong. The design sensibility is clear when you look at the actual product.

The challenge I see is that someone discovering [Brand] online for the first time would not immediately understand that. The Instagram communicates some of it, but the website (or lack of one) and overall brand touchpoints do not carry the same energy as the clothes.

We work with fashion brands in Lagos on exactly this kind of gap. Happy to share a couple of specific observations if you are interested, no strings attached.

Template C — Expansion / New Collection Trigger

Subject (email): Congrats on [new collection / expansion / milestone]

Hi [Name],

Saw that [Brand] just [launched X / expanded to Y / dropped a new collection]. That is a strong move.

Moments like this are often when brands outgrow their current identity. The visual system that worked at one stage starts to feel limiting at the next. We have seen this pattern with several fashion clients in Lagos.

If you have been thinking about whether [Brand]'s identity still reflects where the company is going, we would be glad to share what we have seen work. Short call, no deck, just a conversation.

Template D — Competitor Contrast

Subject (email): Something I noticed about [Brand]

Hi [Name],

I have been looking at the Lagos fashion space, and [Brand]'s product quality clearly competes at a premium level. The pieces speak for themselves.

What I noticed is that some of your competitors, brands with arguably weaker product, present themselves with more polished brand systems. That creates a perception gap that does not reflect reality.

We work on closing exactly that gap for fashion brands. Happy to share what we observed specifically about [Brand] if you are open to it.

Tier 1: Follow-Up Sequence

Follow-up 1 (4-5 days after initial message)

Hi [Name], following up on my message earlier this week. I put together a quick observation about [Brand]'s visual positioning relative to the product quality. Would you like me to share it? Just a few bullet points, nothing heavy.

Follow-up 2 (5-7 days after follow-up 1)

Hi [Name], last note from me. We just published a case study on a fashion rebrand we did recently. The brand had strong product but the identity was holding back the perception. If that resonates with where [Brand] is, here is the link: [case study URL]. Either way, keep building.

Follow-up 3 (7-10 days after follow-up 2, only if strong fit)

Hi [Name], I will leave it here, but I wanted to share one last thought. We looked at [Brand]'s [specific touchpoint, e.g., website/packaging/social grid] and there is a clear opportunity to [specific improvement]. If you ever want to revisit, we are here.

Common Pain Points in This Vertical

Use these to personalize messages:

1. Product-brand gap: The product is premium but the brand system (logo, packaging, website, social grid) reads as mid-market.
2. Social-first, no system: The brand exists primarily on Instagram with no cohesive visual identity, no website, and no brand guidelines.
3. Inconsistent touchpoints: Different visual languages across website, social, packaging, and campaign materials.
4. No digital storefront: Strong product with no ecommerce presence or a poorly designed one.
5. Outgrown identity: The brand has grown beyond the original logo and visuals but has not updated them.
6. Competitor perception gap: Weaker competitors present more polished brands and capture attention that should belong to the stronger product.

Tone Notes

Fashion prospects respond to confidence and taste. The message should feel like it comes from someone who understands the space, not a generic agency pitch. Reference specific products, collections, or design decisions. Avoid corporate language. Keep it direct and brief.
