

Beauty & Personal Care — Full Proposal Template

Purpose

Tier 3 document for qualified beauty/personal care prospects. Full Visiomind proposal following the 9-section framework, adapted for the specific dynamics of beauty brands: packaging as primary touchpoint, ecommerce conversion, product range scalability, and visual storytelling.

Structure

01 — Why We Are Reaching Out

We first noticed [Brand Name] because of [specific product, ingredient approach, or market position]. After our conversation on [date], it became clear that the brand has built genuine product quality and customer loyalty but has reached a stage where the visual identity and packaging system need to evolve to match the company's growth trajectory.

02 — What We Observed

Detailed assessment covering:

- Product and packaging — current label design, container quality, unboxing experience, how the packaging performs in flat-lays and user-generated content
 - Brand identity — logo, typography, colour palette, how the brand presents across different contexts
 - Website and ecommerce — product photography, page layout, product descriptions, checkout flow, mobile experience, trust signals (reviews, certifications, ingredient transparency)
 - Social media and content — grid consistency, content quality, story presence, engagement patterns, influencer content quality
 - Competitive positioning — how [Brand Name] presents relative to competitors at the same price point
 - Range architecture — how well the visual system accommodates the current and planned product range

03 — The Business Implication

In beauty, brand perception directly determines willingness to pay. When the packaging and digital experience communicate premium quality, customers accept a higher price point, feel more confident in the purchase, and are more likely to display and recommend the product. When the brand presentation falls below the product quality, customer acquisition costs increase because the brand must overcome a perception gap through additional marketing effort.

Specifically for [Brand Name]: [reference specific commercial implication from the research, e.g., "the current packaging is limiting the brand's ability to enter premium retail channels" or "the website's conversion rate is likely below potential because the product pages do not communicate the ingredient differentiation effectively"].

04 — Our Hypothesis

The product quality and customer loyalty are real. The gap is in the brand system surrounding the product. [Brand Name] has outgrown the identity and packaging that served it in its earlier stage. The opportunity is to build a brand system that matches the current quality of the product and can scale with the company's planned growth, including [reference any expansion plans the founder mentioned].
