[Brand Name] — Brand Diagnostic

"[Brand Name] delivers an experience that earns repeat visits and strong reviews. The brand presentation does not yet match the quality of the physical experience, which limits the brand's ability to attract new guests and command premium positioning."

Page 2: What We Observed

1. Brand identity does not reflect the quality of the space. The current logo, typography, and visual treatment are generic relative to the atmosphere and care visible in the physical experience.
2. Website is informational rather than experiential. The site communicates location, pricing, and amenities but does not convey the feeling of being there. Hospitality buyers respond to emotion and aspiration, and the current site is transactional.
3. Photography does not capture the atmosphere. The images used across the website and social media do not communicate the level of design, ambiance, and attention to detail present in the actual space.
4. Brand touchpoints are inconsistent. The signage, menu design, social media, website, and marketing materials each communicate a slightly different visual identity. The guest experience feels cohesive in person but fragmented online.
5. Social media does not build the brand. Content is posted regularly but lacks a visual system, consistent tone, and strategic direction. Individual posts do not contribute to a cumulative brand impression.

Page 3: The Opportunity

The physical experience is the foundation. What is missing is a brand system that translates that experience into every digital and print touchpoint. When a potential guest discovers [Brand Name] online, they should feel the same level of quality and care that they would feel walking through the door. That alignment between digital impression and physical experience builds trust, increases booking conversion, and justifies premium pricing.
