

Tech & SaaS — Full Proposal Template

Structure

01 — Why We Are Reaching Out

[Company]'s product has clear traction and solves a real problem in [category]. After our conversation on [date], it became evident that the company is at a stage where the brand identity, website, and positioning need to match the maturity and ambition of the product.

02 — What We Observed

- Product positioning — value proposition clarity, differentiation narrative, how the product is framed against competitors
- Brand identity — logo, typography, colour, visual language across product, marketing, and corporate contexts
- Website — landing page effectiveness, conversion flow, content hierarchy, social proof, mobile experience, page speed
- Product UI alignment — whether the marketing brand and product interface feel like the same company
- Marketing materials — feature launches, case studies, blog design, sales decks, conference materials
- Social and content — LinkedIn presence, Twitter/X, blog quality, developer community engagement (if applicable)
- Competitive positioning — brand and website comparison with 3-5 competitors

03 — The Business Implication

In tech, the brand is the first filter. When a potential customer evaluates multiple solutions, the website and brand quality influence their willingness to take the next step, whether that is signing up, booking a demo, or forwarding the link to a decision-maker. A brand that communicates professionalism and reliability shortens the sales cycle, increases conversion, and makes the product more defensible against competitors who invest in presentation.

04 — Our Hypothesis

The product is strong. The brand and positioning have not kept pace. [Company] is now competing at a level where the visual identity, website, and marketing system need to match. The opportunity is to invest in positioning and design so that the brand closes the gap and becomes an asset rather than a liability.
