

Entertainment & Media — Full Proposal Template

Structure

01 — Why We Are Reaching Out

[Company]'s creative output is clearly at a high level. After our conversation, it became clear that the brand infrastructure needs to match the ambition and quality of the work.

02 — What We Observed

- Company brand — logo, identity, visual language, how it functions as an umbrella across projects
- Project/event branding — individual project identities, event visuals, campaign art
- Website — portfolio/showcase quality, functionality, content architecture
- Social media — visual consistency, content strategy, audience engagement
- Physical/experiential — merchandise, event design, stage branding, signage, promotional materials
- Marketing materials — press kits, sponsor decks, partnership presentations
- Competitive positioning — brand comparison with peers in the space

03 — The Business Implication

A strong brand system in entertainment and media directly affects the ability to attract premium sponsors, secure partnerships, command higher ticket prices, and sign better talent. When the brand communicates at the same level as the creative output, every project launches from a stronger position.

04 — Our Hypothesis

The creative quality is proven. The brand infrastructure has not been built to match. As [Company] scales, whether through more events, new content, or expansion into new markets, the lack of a cohesive brand system will become increasingly limiting.
